What kind of behaviors and activities are considered appropriate for girls in school?

Thinking that it is not appropriate for girls to scream loudly or to do activities that are considered for boys; assuming that they are the caregivers and should be more responsible for considering themselves more mature than their peers, are some examples of the normative idea of gender.

The #BinaryGenderNorm implies that today women are produced as a second-class subject in schools.

"Embroidering the body" is an animated documentary in stop motion using embroidery as the raw material for the animation. It's the story of Angelica narrating to her daughter, "her little bird", about how she was born. The short film portrays the process of putting into words and illustrating how the most important experience of her life became a trauma, due to the obstetric violence she suffered. She filed a lawsuit. The agreement that they reached with the lawyers was compensation but in exchange, the darkness of silence. While her daughter grows up, her need for this story to come to light grows. It is a short film for her daughter, a story about healing with embroidery in motion, so she can sew the truth together.

Lirio is 5 years old and, like most kids that age, he doesn't want to do boring chores that his mother asks him to do.

It's easier to listen to his friend, the dragonfly Bela, and become a tree. After all, when have you ever seen a tree brushing its teeth? They sure do live well.

Poston Digital Arts

In our childhood, ordinary objects sparked extraordinary stories.

The legend of the Sumo Ninjas emerges, with three martial arts heroes combating chaos and villains threatening peace on Phantásos.

Facing plastic beings, vampire zombies, and fire-spitting socks, they triumph, exploring love, struggle, environment, loneliness, and friendship through a child-like lens.

Everytime Alma (6) feels some emotion unfamiliar to her, the magical forest in which she lives reacts and some fantastic natural phenomenon is unleashed, when she is sad, it rains torrentially or if she feels an overflowing joy, flowers grow non-stop, invading everything. With Kai, the guide bird of the forest, her best friend Lonley, her little sister Tita and Kufu, her faithful companion, they will have to restore the forest, but in the attempt, they will make everything worse. They discover that it is actually Alma who must be brought back to calm. In each episode, Kai sings a song to calm Alma's emotions, helping her through the melody and the lyrics to recognize what is happening to her. When Alma finds out what's wrong with her, she now sings to the forest and brings peace back.
